Back

As you walk through the forest, you feel a strange energy drawing you into the woods. Between the trees you see a yellowish light that gets more intense as you approach. After walking for some time, you reach a glade in the woods and can finally see the sky. In this place you find ruins of what you believe to have been an ancient temple. In the center of these ruins you see the yellowish light again. As you get close to it you realize it's a bonfire.

It's a great game but I think it's a little bit short from start to finish took me only half an hour to get to the end of the game in a single playthrough. Luckily it has multiple endings (Which means multiple playthroughs) otherwise it wouldn't be worth the price.. This was my first choose-your-own narrative game I must say I was very happy with this purchase. The world you interact with is interesting, each choice you make adds vivid detail of what occurs, and the character development that occurs from your choices definitely seems to help drive the story. You can tell this game had a lot of heart put into it, and I look forward to replaying this game and discovering what alternate endings.
